North Pole Jr. Sr. High School
North Pole, Alaska 99705

There were many changes in our school this past year. Mr. Lee Solis and Mr. Terry Marquette were the new Junior High vice principals. Mr. Steve Cosgrove, the Activities Director, arrived at our school in December. There were many new junior high teachers, including Miss Vignola, Mr. Schauer, Mrs. Desinger, Ms. Finsrud, Mr. Lugin, Ms. Fisher and Miss Davis. Last year, there were new classes offered to students. The Patriot Press, taught by Ms. Finsrud put out a Junior High newspaper. Yearbook, taught by Miss Vignola, produced our Yearbook. The class named the Yearbook, The Document, which will stay with the junior high each year. One of the luxuries our school provided us with was a new hot lunch program. It gave students a much larger variety than the previous year. It also had a higher price, which wasn't popular with the students.

Miss Vignola and editor Erich Ivman discuss plans for the yearbook.

Ms. Finsrud and her class enjoy a book together in the irritating matroom.

Mike Leroux relaxes with music and a smile.

Lisa Johnson, Debra Clark, and Mary Combs learn to deal with the new lunch room rules.

This past year, our school experienced overcrowding. We had to have classes in the cafeteria, the matroom and the hallway dividing the pool and the gym. The portables were a big relief. Another change that was made was the implementing of new lunchroom rules, due to overcrowding. Before, students were free to roam aimlessly through the front hall or go outside at lunch until the freedom was ended. Students now had to stay in their seats until a staff member dismissed them. Tape players Sony Walkmans and the latest tunes were seen, as well as other fads. We experienced punk, stripes, leg warmers, long coats and friendship pins. The mini skirt was back, as was other styles.

There were new clubs, such as the Chess Club, Astronomy Club, Dungeons and Dragons and the Drama Club.

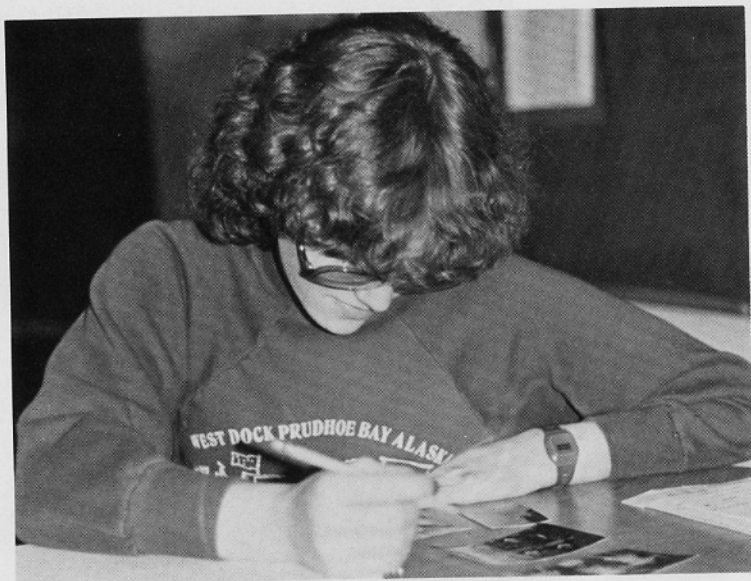

It was a year to remember when we all received our Permanent Fund Checks, giving us 1,000 dollars to spend. All of these things that happened made our year more exciting and memorable.

Friendship pins given by friends.

Laura Holladay sits back and enjoys the thought of being $1,000 richer.

Laura Sumey listens to her headphones while watching a wrestling match.

ORGANIZATIONS

Student Council creates a better year

The hard working Student Council meets every week during junior high lunch to discuss ideas and plans for future activities. The officers were elected by the students at the beginning of the school year. The gave speeches during an assembly, then students voted during their first hour classes. Representatives were also chosen during first hour classes. This year's Student Council was busy planning both dances and fund raising events. For the first time, the active council sponsored a booth at the Oktoberfest. The dart throw booth was a success, as well as a good experience for all involved. The Student Council also sponsored some very successful dances, including a Christmas Dance and a Valentine's Dance. Mr. Seaney, sponsor, commented, "This year's Student Council worked well together .

YEARBOOK STAFF PUBLISHED PATRIOT MEMORIES

This was the first year that Junior High students had a yearbook class and all students would agree that yearbook making had two sides to it—painful and rewarding.

Students had to be dedicated and work hard in order to get things done in yearbook, like meeting teachers for interviews, writing copyediting, picture taking, doing layout and selling ads in order to pay for the yearbook.

There were many deadlines to meet and so much work to be done that students often had to put in their spare time, during their vacations or on teacher workdays. The staff also named the yearbook, The Document after thinking, arguing and voting. They decided on this name because a document is a piece of paper that furnishes proof and information—which is exactly what the yearbook is.

Miss Vignola, advisor, commented "I am proud of the yearbook staff because their hard work and dedication produced a yearbook that students can be proud of."

The Drama Club had a very successful year. They scheduled fund-raising activities, such as Custom Cookies during Oktoberfest and Valentine's Day. They also had a bake sale at Market Basket III. The Drama Club wrote and produced a smashing and exciting musical called Dreams... A Magical, Musical Memory. It was about two elderly people seeing and realizing how their lives were when they were young stars. Having flashbacks and memories of the past of their days of stardom was formed into Broadway hits taken from "Annie", "Fame", "Gigi", "Applause" and "South Pacific".

Miss McLachlan, advisor said "It's really special to see something you have put time in come alive on stage. The play provided a lot of our own memories and a lot of magical moments for North Pole students.

Matmaids Inspire Wrestlers

Although most people seem to think that being a mat maid is easy, it isn't! Mopping mats, running back and forth with ice and getting the first aid kit can really get tiring. Other than that, the mat maids had to make sure the wrestlers did all of their laps to keep in shape. At the meets, mat maids kept score and gave oranges to the wrestlers.

Patriot Wrestlers Reach For Region Titles

This year, the Jr. High Wrestling season began with the Ryan Take-Down tournament on Feb. 5th and lasted until March 20th. The coaches were Mr. Elliot and Mr. Keil. At practice, the wrestlers did laps, worked on takedowns and practiced pinning moves. But to help them in an actual match, they did spin drills, bridging and leg lifts. Asst. Coach Keil thought that this year had more participation than last. He also thought that the team was very successful.

Cross- Country Races to Victory

The Junior High Cross Country team started practice during the second week of school. Not only did the team members practice with the high school, they ran the same courses as they did. The only meet held was at Ryan, which was a 2.8 mile run. North Pole took all three places, with Erich Lyman, Robert Massey and Sean Lyman, respectively. Team members trained hard and improved their times greatly over the season.

Erich Lyman races towards the finish line to turn in a first place for the Patriots.

The Cross Country Team includes: Bill Gelinas, Robert Massey, Sean Lyman, (back row) Jason Winer, Shawn Alexander, and Erich Lyman.

ACTIVITIES

Students take on the challenge

North Pole Junior High students were challenged on Thursday, Sept. 23, 1982. They attended the "Spirit of Challenge", an assembly sponsored by Pepsi and KFAR. The emcee was Chuck Mason, an actor. He is from New York and has been doing the assemblies for two years. He showed a film with some famous people telling about their challenges. Students saw Jesse Owens, the lead singer from Foreigner, Sandra Day O'Connor, and Gilda Radner. Chuck told us, "Set your challenge". After the film, three students were chosen from the audience. Trena McGraw, Doug Pratt and Glen Kitchen made recordings that would be aired later that evening.

They all received six-packs of Pepsi for their cooperation. That night was NPJSHS Dedication Night at KFAR, and students phoned in their requests. The Spirit of Challenge inspired us all!!

The North Pole Junior High students waited patiently for emcee Chuck Mason to begin the "Spirit of Challenge" Pepsi Assembly.

Patriots Spell Relief

P-O-R-T-A-B-L-E-S

The matroom, cafeteria and the hallway between the gym and the pool were all used as temporary classrooms the first quarter of the 1982-83 school year. The overcrowding forced students and teachers to use these rooms as temporary classrooms, until the portables could be built. Both teachers and students agreed that you couldn't hear very well because of the echos and the lights gave everyone a headache. The cafeteria had its advantages, you could eat lunch early if you had class 4th hour, but it got noisy when the high school students passed by. The hallway was hard to see in and crowded. The desks were all small, since they were from the elementary school. Now that all the portables are here, Mr. Allison, Mr. Lugin, Ms. Finsrud, Mrs. Desinger, Mrs. Fancy and Miss Vignola have an easier time teaching. The portables really were a change for the better.

Mr. Lugin has to teach his seventh grade class in the hallway between the gym and the pool due to overcrowding.

Mrs. Fancy teaches her eighth grade Reading class in her new portable classroom.

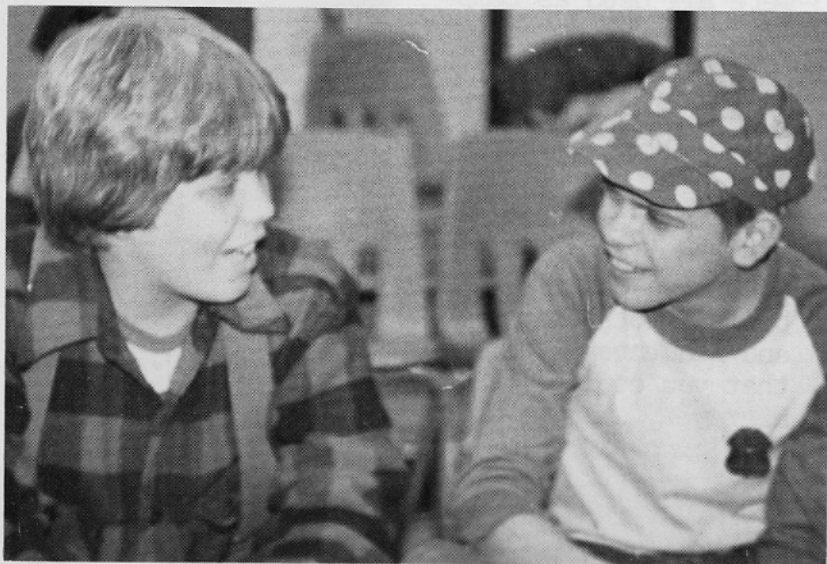

Whodunit?

Only The Cast Knows For Sure

"WHODUNIT"? Only the cast knew for sure, and they weren't telling anyone. The play was performed by Ms. McLachlan's 3rd hour drama class at North Pole Junior High.

The play was a mellow drama based on a killer in the kitchen, but the big secret throughout the play was who the victim really was. The main idea of the play was for the detectives and the audience to figure out who the killer really was.

The play was performed for students during an in-school presentation and at the Junior High Fine Arts Festival.

Kim Wiersum and Bill Gelinas pass the time away with a quick joke before the play begins.

The cast from Whodunit? are given a standing ovation from the audience.

The Stone In The Road Taught Lesson To All

Mike Tuttle, Erich Lyman, Deanna Cobb, Cyndi Rybachek, Sara Towse and Millie DeValcourt all gather to listen to the rock.

Deanna Cobb and Cyndi Rybachek rehearse one last time before the curtain rises.

"The Stone in the Road" was performed by the first hour speech and drama class, under the direction of Ms. McLachlan. The actors and actresses' worked very hard to produce the play. A series of people were involved, including a beautiful queen and her maiden, a number of melancholy children, a happily married couple with an overpowering wife and a lot more surprises. The stone blocking the way had to be moved, and only two young children would move it. For their efforts, they were given a lovely ring and a valuable lesson. The play had inspiring thoughts, great humor and drama.

Teachers Honor Deserving Students

Dr. Borden awards her students, Amy Behrendt, Fred Hopper, Jerry Young and Jim Howard with Math Certificates for effort and cooperation.

On February 4, 1983 an Honors Assembly was held to give recognition to those who made the Honor Roll and to outstanding students. The 7th grade met during third and fourth hours and the 8th graders met during sixth and seventh hours.

The teachers gave the students awards for different achievements, such as: most improved, best attitude, hardest worker, and others. The highlight of the 8th grade assembly was when Mr. Solis did his imitation of a piece of bacon frying in a pan, which brought laughs to all. The teachers also commented that the 8th graders showed a lot of class and respect for their teachers and fellow students.

Valentines Dance Gives Patriots A Chance To Show Their Style

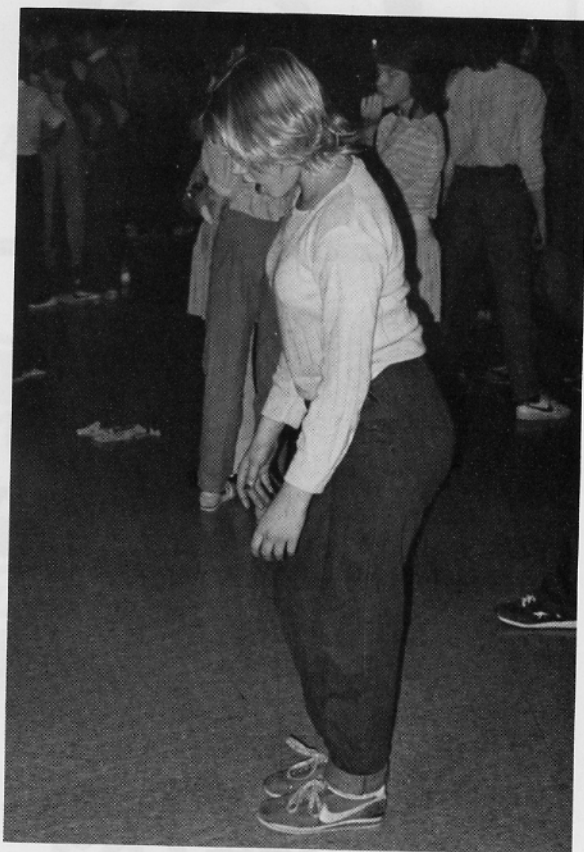

On March 12th, the Jr. High Student Council sponsored a Valentine's Day Dance. Chaperones for the dance included Mr. Solis, Mr. Seaney, Miss Vignola and Mr. Elliot, who also took pictures.

The dance contest was exciting for all who participated and for those who watched. Tom Sullivan and Lisa Carter took first place while Kim Blankenship and Brian Bennett came in second.

Decorations were red, white and pink. A huge graffitti board covered the wall so students could write on them. It was a terrific dance for everyone.

Alisa Ault, and Terry Hagel show us their style at the Valentines Dance.
